Freddie Mac Foundation's
Wednesday's Child

By now most of us have heard the phrase “no child left behind”, and at Wednesday’s Child we work at making it more than just a concept by doing what we can to ensure that every child has permanency. Most of us also recognize that, with time, families grow and change and their focus can shift as well. Perhaps your family has been looking to expand through adoption for awhile but is only now starting to think that an older child might make the right addition.

Our kids grow and change, too. We first met Bonnie back in 2008 out on the soccer field. At the time Bonnie was all about sports ...and while she still enjoys sports, Bonnie has become more active in pursuing things on the artistic and creative side. She no longer wears primarily sports apparel but is growing into a young lady who now is into wearing lip gloss and jewelry. One thing that hasn’t changed, though, is her desire to be part of a permanent and loving family that is a good fit for her.

Born in 1996, Bonnie is now a teenager and has developed a stronger sense of self and what she wants. Bonnie asked about being on Wednesday’s Child again and in the spirit of “no child left behind”, we met up with this sweet young lady again at a venue of her choosing to chat and get the creative juices flowing.

Thanks to our long-time Wednesday's Child partners at Color Me Mine in Valencia, California, we got to sit and chat and get to know more about who Bonnie is and who she is becoming while she showed off her creativity. This young lady is developing a good sense of humor and social skills. She continues to get good grades and currently is contemplating a career in the arts or computer-related graphic design work. Bonnie displayed focus and attention to detail while working on her Color Me Mine project.

As a teenager, Bonnie is not a blank canvas; but she is far from being a completed masterpiece either. Her future still holds many broad and colorful strokes as well as fine details – all of which could be enhanced by the guidance and nurturing of a permanent family that, when blended with Bonnie, make a complementary palate.
