Freddie Mac Foundation's
Wednesday's Child

Award season may be winding down in Hollywood, but we have another award to give out in the “cutest and most energetic performance by a sister act” category. This week’s frontrunners in this category are twins Julyssa (2004) and Maricela (2004) along with their baby sister Andrea (2006). Working with this trio can be quite fun. And while they are not demanding divas, they do require some special handling.

As with many twins, it can be hard to tell Julyssa and Maricela apart – especially since they both like to pretend play as princesses in the same way. In the case of Julyssa and Maricela, both twins also have some mild developmental delays for which they receive services. Within the right family and environment, we know that they can flourish – together and individually – despite some of the obstacles they face.

Andrea is two years younger than her sisters and she definitely has a personality all her own. Andrea’s play is a bit more adventurous than her sisters’ –more “Dora the Explorer” than princess. While she is not one of the twins, Andrea still shares in a special bond that only sisters seem to share. While their interests may vary, all three of these girls have each other’s best interest at heart and each sister looks out and defends the others.

For this active trio we wanted to do something physically therapeutic as well as fun. Thanks to our friends at “My Gym” in Beverly Hills, California we got to do just that. As the girls were led through a constructive physical exercise, we found it hard not to jump in and participate in all the energetic fun.

When it comes to being able to bring fun, joy and smiles into the hearts and home of a family, these three will deliver. And someday those that accept the role of supportive and nurturing forever-family-members to this trio will thank their lucky stars ... and their support system of social workers and service providers and teachers and whoever else helped them in their role of a lifetime.
