Freddie Mac Foundation's
Wednesday's Child

Helping those in need is par for the course for firefighters, so it is not alarming to find the Los Angeles City Fire Department joining forces with Wednesday's Child. This week we are putting out a call to all in order to find a family who is ready and able to provide permanency to Matthew (2000) and Georgia (2006).

Matthew and Georgia have a somewhat unique situation – Matthew is technically Georgia's uncle and she his niece. While not siblings per se, these two are close in age and share a bond that is very sibling-like in nature.

As Matthew and Georgia discovered during their Wednesday's Child adventure, donning on heavy firefighting gear is a daunting task and one that requires guidance and assistance. Our skilled friends at the LAFD lent their helping hands this day, but we are looking for a family that can provide Matthew and Georgia on-going guidance and support within a safe and loving adoptive home.

While Matthew was quicker to jump on a ladder-truck and Georgia still needed to be given more assurance and security, they both possess senses of adventure and of affection that they share with one another and have to offer a family. Matthew and Georgia both took warmly to the fire station's mascot, Wilshire, and were happy to leave with fluffy versions of the fire-fighting dog. If seeing these two stirs the embers of your heart to open up your home to children in need, please ring our phone.
