Wednesday's Child

Paula (born in October 1994) is a smart young lady of Caribbean descent who enjoys music, dancing, poetry and acting. And since this teen still wants to be adopted by a loving considerate family, we made some time to rendezvous at FOX 11 Studios to get to know Paula a bit better.

Paula is the kind of girl that can roll with the punches and is willing to try new things. However, acceptance and safety are still very important to her and she does well with defined expectations and encouragement.

Throughout her young life, Paula has made and maintained connections and it's important to her that any prospective adoptive family be sensitive to those connections. Sometimes kids growing up in foster care are forced to mature quickly and while this young lady is mature, she'd like to be in a family where she can just be a teen and flourish like any other kid.

During our time with Paula at the Studio, we learned that she is interested in helping others by someday becoming a nurse, and that she finds she can express her feelings through writing songs when her mind is at peace.
