Freddie Mac Foundation's
Wednesday's Child

Rebecca and Amy are this week's Wednesday's Child team of two sisters. Rebecca was born in 1997 and her sister Amy was born in 2001 and they both like outdoor activities. Both girls love soccer and having played on a soccer team, so we decided to get to know the girls while giving them the opportunity to practice with the Los Angeles Galaxy.

For an afternoon, Galaxy superstars Alan Gordon and Sean Franklin teamed up with this pair of sisters to help them perfect their game. From juggling the ball, learning the proper way to do headers and of course scoring a goal, our experts guided Rebecca and Amy every step of the way. In between lessons we learned a little more about the girls.

Sometimes situations in foster care do not always afford optimal circumstances for our kids. While we strive to have siblings placed together, it's not always possible. For these sisters, being apart has been difficult and whenever they get together they demonstrate a bond that reiterates the need that siblings often have to be together. The real goal for this team of sisters is to grow up in the same adoptive home and flourish together.

No one is more adamant about that that Rebecca; being the big sister, she always has the welfare of Amy on her mind. The same circumstances that can lead children to being placed in foster care often contribute to older siblings taking on more responsibility than they should and miss out on the luxury of just being a kid. While Rebecca is managing to do well in school and really values education, she'd really like to be with her sister all the time to keep an eye out for her.

Amy took awhile longer to warm up, but once she observed Rebecca and knew that Rebecca was watching and that it was okay, Amy couldn't get enough of the camera. It's clear that younger sister Amy really thrives on attention and can do so with ease because she knows big sister is watching over her.

Both girls deserve and need the love, safety and guidance that only a permanent family can provide. On this day, these soccer fans received autographed jerseys from the LA Galaxy, but it was clear that Rebecca and Amy are each other's biggest fans.

We're waiting for the girls to score a permanent family to call their own. It's our goal to help that family get on the right playing field.
