Freddie Mac Foundation's
Wednesday's Child

This week's Wednesday's Child is Ricky, an athletic kid who enjoys playing and watching football, soccer, baseball and basketball. Born in 1998, Ricky seems to have a curiosity about, interest in and enthusiasm for many things. Needless to say, this basketball fan and all-round curious kid was game for a chance to "court" the world famous Harlem Globetrotters. With no other press activities or practices to worry about, Ricky went one-on-one (or in this case, two-on-one) at a neighborhood court with a couple of the Harlem Globetrotter hoopsters.

After getting some inside tips about their tricks-of-the-trade, Ricky felt ready to take on these two pros. For a little guy, Ricky showed us that he's got some skills – or should we say "game?" It became easy to see that, at least on the court, Ricky allows hope and belief to rule instead of letting self-doubt impede him from even trying.

All of us, even those like Ricky who have an enthusiasm to try things, sometimes need someone to look us in the eyes and say, “yes you can.” That kind of support can make someone’s self-confidence soar. Ricky is often ready to give his best effort; we’re looking for a family ready to commit to helping Ricky reach for and be his best while providing unconditional love and a place for Ricky to call home.

Ricky was invited to attend an upcoming Globetrotter game which happens to fall on his birthday, so Ricky is ready and waiting to celebrate with the Globetrotters! More importantly, though, Ricky is ready and waiting to be part of the right permanent and supportive family that will help him focus, grow, and shoot for the stars!
